SILVER WEDDING

MR. AND MRS. ERNEST E. DANA CELEBRATE TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OF WEDDED LIFE

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer E. Dana of 318 North Louise street celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage and invited about thirty-five relatives and friends to enjoy the festival with them Saturday evening at their spacious home, their guest list including a few who were present at their nuptials in Santa Barbara, Cal.

In honor of an occasion which can come but once, their home was beautifully decorated with flowers and ferns in a green and pink color scheme, caried out in festoons of asparagus plumosus, with carnations and chrysanthemums, the same colors dominating the individual bouquets in cut glass holders that marked the places of guests at the refreshment tables which were beautiful in all their appointments. The host and hostess were the recipients of a shower of silver coin which amounted to quite a sum, and also received many handsome gifts of silver. The list of those present included: Mr. and Mrs. Miles, Mrs. Ernest Miles and family, Mr. and Mrs. George Miles and family, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips of San Fernando, Mrs. Treat and Mrs. Keogh of Hollywood, Fred B. Sanders of Long Beach and George L. Sanders of Los Angeles, brothers of Mrs. E. E. Dana, Mrs. Fred B. Sanders and family and Mrs. George L. Sanders and family, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Sanders of Colton, parents of Mrs. Dana, Misses Nada and Ruth Dana, daughters of the host and hostess.

TROPICO PRESBYTERIAN NOTES

At the Tropico Presbyterian Church last Sunday morning, Rev. Dr. S. T. Montgomery, of the Anti-Saloon League, preached. An offering was taken for the State campaign in support of the Harris Enforcement Bill.

In the evening "Bible Sunday" was observed. An interesting feature was the presentation of six copies of the Gospel of John which were brought from San Francisco to Los Angeles by airplane last Friday. They were given to the first six young people who responded with passages of Scripture.

Dr. Duncan exhibited a large family Bible purchased by his grandfather for the sum of $25.00 in 1803. He also called attention to the fact that though books written by men are frequently revised the Word of God has never been revised, many translations but no revisions.

Four Minute Men nave spoken at the Tropico Presbyterian Church for the last two Sundays. C. W. Angier spoke on the general theme, Sam Brown on the Stewardship of Time and Money, Dr. L. E. Richardson on Proportionate Giving from a Personal Experience of Thirty Years.

FAR REACHING

READERS OF EVENING NEWS AT ONEONTA, N. Y., COMING TO GLENDALE

Publishers, as a class, throw a lot of bread on the waters and once in a while some of it comes back in unexpected ways. Such a return has come through Mrs. S. Alice Norton and her mother, Mrs. Maria Piersall, who have come from Oneonta, New York, to spend the winter in Glendale. They have been coming to Southern California annually for four years and have tried several locations but are agreed that Glendale pleases them better than any other city in this part of the state. They feel now that they "belong" and have become so interested in the community that for some time they have been subscribers to the Evening News. The paper has been passed around among their friends and neighbors in Oneonta who through it have come to feel very well acquainted with Glendale and learned to watch for its arrival. When Mrs. Norton and her mother left Oneonta they had to promise to continue the subscription so the neighbors would not be deprived of the pleasure of reading it. Through this education in the life of Glendale, five families are coming to this city in the near future. The head of one of these families is the manager of the 5 and 10c store in Oneonta. He was to start the first of December. One family left on the 21st of November, and two others are to leave some time this month.

HOW THEY GROW

INTERESTING INFORMATION ABOUT BANANA AND COCOANUT CULTURE BY EXPERT

Frank Bradley, who left Glendale nearly four years ago for Tela, Honduras, with his family, recently wrote to his mother, Mrs. W. C. Bradley of 523 Oak street in answer to her query regarding the culture of bananas and cocoanuts and she has kindly allowed the Evening News to publish it for the information of readers interested in that subject and also interested in what Frank is doing. The letter reads as follows:

"Bananas. Each stalk grows one bunch of bananas, and its term of utility is at an end. When the stem of bananas is cut, the stalk is cut down close to the ground and another grows up from same. which in the course of 9 to 12 months produces another stem of bananas, and is in turn cut down, etc., etc. However, while a stalk is growing up a number of suckers grow up around it, called "bits" and in Spanish "hijos," each one giving a stalk, and producing a stem of bananas, and the mess of stalks and bits is called a "mat." I have seen mats that had 42 stalks and bits in them. To plant new lands these bits are dug up. transported to new land and planted. In order to get good-sized stems of bananas, mats are pruned out and only four to five stalks allowed to grow in each mat. In this part of the country when a plantation is in full production, they give about 186 stems of bananas to the acre, of which one-half is harvested from May 15th to September 15th, four months of warm weather, when the bananas grow and fill out quicker, and the other half of the yearly production is harvested during the other eight months which are cooler, and the fruit does not grow and fill out as fast as during the warm season. Consequently the harvesting is done anywhere from once to three or four times a week, and so as to give full ship loads. The present acreage here produces about 150,000 stems a week during the four months' season, and 75,000 a week during the other eight months. When new land is planted, one bit is planted every 16 feet; after about 14 months fruit is harvested in small lots, thereafter each stalk grows bits and other stalks around it, and in from two to three years the plantation is in full production Bananas are loaded on special pack saddles on mules here, four to five stems to the mule and taken to railroad track, put in piles and later picked up by railroad train and transported to Tela wharf where they are put on board by mechanical conveyors and stowed in the hold of the ship. Ships going long distance, say six or seven days, have refrigeration; any old ship does to New Orleans and Mobile as fruit is on board only about three to four days. On arrival in States if fruit left here fresh they get about 90 per cent green and in good shape to be transported all over the States, and the other 10 per cent, which is ripe or turning ripe, is sold locally at a very low price. Bananas here are classified by hands; a stem of bananas with less than seven hands is rejected, they only ship seven-hand stems and up, and stems that are not fully developed in the fingers are also rejected. Some stems of bananas go as high as 22 hands of 11 to 12 fingers each hand. In the States the fruit is sold by weight, but here the independent fruit, that is, fruit not grown by the company but bought from private owners, is purchased according to the number of hands on the stem. The unit price is for nine-hand stems or more, and eight hands are purchased for three-quarters the price of a nine, and sevens for one-half the price of a nine. The company plantations are divided into farms. Those here are named after various states in the U. S., Montana, Dakota, California, Alabama, etc. Each plantation or farm consists of about 1500 acres, has an overseer in charge, a timekeeper, two foremen, a cook, yardboy and servant, a stockman, a couple of day laborers and balance of work is done by local contractors, who prune for so much an acre, clean the farms, that is cut down the underbrush and weed growth, for so much an acre, and cut the bananas and deliver at railroad loading point for so much a stem, the company supplying the mules. Bananas are very rarely consumed here on the coast, and only when there is a shortage of flour, when the green bananas are boiled and used instead of bread or tortillas. Sometimes they make a stew of green bananas, pork, etc., etc.

"Coconuts (this is correct way to spell it as cocoanuts, the American way of spelling, is another animal altogether.) They grow on the beach-

TREASURY DEFICIT

REPORT OF SECRETARY GLASS SHOWS IT WILL AMOUNT TO OVER $3,000,000,000 JUNE 30, 1920

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The annual report of Secretary of the Treasury Glass made to Congress today shows there will be a deficit of over three billions on the books June 30th, 1920.

Secretary Glass predicted an additional deficit of a billion and a half dollars for the following fiscal year. He estimated expenditures for the current fiscal year at $11,476,000,000 and for the next fiscal year at $3,973,000,000. Receipts for the current fiscal year were placed at $7,318,000,000 and for the next fiscal year at $5,620,000,000.

His report showed that the total cost of the war to the United States was $26,007,000,000 exclusive of loans to the allies and that 43 per cent of this was paid from current receipts. The gross public debt is now $26,210,000,000.

KILLED IN BELGIAN CONGO

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 3.—Dr. Joseph Armstrong, physician and well-known scientist, and William Stowell, a motion picture director, both of Los Angeles, were killed, and Pliny Horne and Henry Kohler, photographers, of Los Angeles, and Edward M. Thierry, a newspaper correspondent of Cleveland, were injured in a train wreck in the Engo Forest, Belgian Congo, South Africa. Word of the wreck came today by cable from Thierry to the newspaper association with which he is connected. All were members of a joint expedition of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington and the Universal Film Company sent to Africa in July. Several natives were also killed in the wreck. Native wood-cutters rescued the injured from the wreck and took them to their huts where they were attended by doctors sent on a special train from Elizabethville, Belgian Congo. Later they were removed to Elizabethville where Thierry sent his cablegram.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 3.—Dr. Armstrong, who was killed in the Belgian Congo, was well known in Los Angeles where he made his home part of the time. He was aged forty-eight years. He had been connected with the Smithsonian institution at Washington in numerous exploration expeditions. William Stowell was one of the best known directors in the motion picture colony here. He had also appeared as an actor. Henry Kohler and Pliny Horne were both well known here, also, Kohler's mother residing in Los Angeles.

THE PRESIDENT'S RECOMMENDATIONS

CONGRESS PREPARING OR CONSIDERING MEASURES WHICH WILL MAKE THEM EFFECTIVE

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Steps are being taken to render effective some of the president's recommendations contained in his message of yesterday to Congress. The House has already passed a bill providing for the establishment of a budget system.

Senator Sterling said today he would introduce soon a bill for the compulsory investigation and mediation of labor disputes. Immediate action will be asked on the pending bill empowering the criminal courts to handle charges of anarchy.

Many bills are already before Congress bearing on the high cost of living but all have spirited opposition. Majority Leader Mondell of the House said today he favored simplification of income and excess-profits taxes. The repeal of luxury taxes seems improbable.

MEXICAN POSITION DEFENDED

ACTING FOREIGN MINISTER MEDINA IS CONFIDENT U. S. WILL BE CONVINCED OF JUSTICE OF MEXICAN ATTITUDE

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 3.—Acting Foreign Minister Medina today told the United Press that the Mexican government's attitude in the Jenkins case remains unchanged. He declared he did not believe there would be a break in the relations of the two governments although he admitted the situation is delicate. He said he could not forecast for publication what the Mexican reply to the latest note from Washington would be, but expressed confidence that the United States would eventually be convinced that Mexico is taking a just position.

TO INVESTIGATE TRADE COMMISSION

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The Senate today adopted Senator Watson's resolution calling for an investigation of the charges that Federal Trade Commission employes had been advocating Bolshevism and Socialism.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT

WORK TRAIN STRIKES WOMAN AND CHILD AT PARK AND BRAND WITH FATAL RESULTS

Another tragedy in connection with the P. E. service occurred this morning in which an aged woman lost her life and a little girl of five or six years was brought close to death. It happened at the corner of Brand and Park avenue about ten a. m., when a work train, bound for Los Angeles and running at a high rate of speed, struck them. They had been making some purchases at the Park Avenue Grocery and had started west across the street when the woman observed the approach of the car and started forward to save the child. Onlookers believe that she sacrificed her own life in the effort and that the child would have been killed outright but for her action.

The little girl is Helen Hughes, daughter of Mrs. Florence Hughes, of 220 West Garfield avenue, and the woman who was killed was Miss Kate Johnston, an aunt of Mrs. Hughes, who was caring for the little girl, Mrs. Hughes being employed in Los Angeles.

Both were alive when taken in a Scovern Company ambulance to the Glendale Sanitarium, but the woman died soon after reaching there. At this writing the child is in a critical condition.

RECIPROCITY MEETING AT BURBANK

Mrs. A. W. Tower, president of the Tuesday Afternoon Club, Mrs. John Robert White, its treasurer, Mrs. Oliver Clark, Mrs. A. T. Spaulding and Mrs. C. R. Hallett drove their automobiles, filled with members of the club, to Burbank, in response to an invitation from the Woman's Club of that city to attend a Reciprocity Day for clubs of the San Fernando Valley. It proved to be a very delightful occasion. Delicious refreshments were served and inspiring addresses were made by Mrs. Sidney Thomas Exley, president of the District Federation, and Mrs. Trewhella, its recording secretary. All the club presidents present responded to call, the dramatic section of the Burbank Club put on a clever play, and all in all it was an entertaining and profitable session.

TO BE ENTERTAINED ON MISSISSIPPI

Miss Grace Beach of North Brand boulevard is entertaining this week Mrs. Jones and her daughter Elizabeth Jones, of Mount Sterling, Ohio. Miss Jones and Miss Beach were schoolmates in the Martha Washington Seminary in Washington, D. C. While there they made the acquaintance of some of the junior officers in the U. S. Naval Academy, who are now senior officers on the U. S. S. Mississippi, at present stationed at San Pedro. These officers are entertaining the young ladies Sunday afternoon on board the Mississippi. Mrs. Jones and her daughter are spending the winter in Southern California.

FAMILY REUNION

Mrs. Ella Richardson, of South Central avenue, returned Tuesday from her trip to King City, where there was a family reunion at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Shives Mitchell, John and Paul Richardson coming down from the north to be with their mother and sister at that time. Mrs. Mitchell and little son, Billy, motored back with Mrs. Richardson and will be her guests until after the holidays. Mr. Mitchell joining them at that time.

NEW RESIDENCE

Residents on North Louise are greatly interested in a new house of the Swiss chalet type, which is going up on the corner of Louise and Mountain View avenue. It is being built by a gentleman connected with the firm of Mullen & Bluett, of Los Angeles, and will contain about seven rooms. There is considerable inquiry for property in that part of Glendale and it is becoming quite a favorite with artists because of the lovely valley views it commands.

BOSTON GUESTS

Mrs. B. L. Cline of 720 East Windsor has been entertaining during the past week relatives from Boston, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Collins and daughter. They are spending the winter in Los Angeles and left Boston the middle of November. In making comparisons of the cost of living here and there they stated that fresh eggs when they left there were $1.20 per dozen or 10c each.

OIL AND COTTON

FOUNDATION OF PROSPERITY OF TEXAS AND OKLAHOMA SAYS BLAKE FRANKLIN

Blake Franklin returned Monday night from a business trip to El Paso and Dallas, Texas. During his absence he took occasion to visit Ardmore, Okla., where he has two brothers and two sisters, and saw something of the oil development in which the whole section is deeply concerned. As new wells are being brought in daily, the interest never flags. He saw many evidences of great prosperity in Northern Texas and Southern Oklahoma. Aside from the oil industry the country realizes a large amount of money from its cotton output which has brought great prosperity to the farmers. It averages 40c per pound which makes a bale worth about $250.00. A few years ago 12 to 13c per pound was considered a high price. He saw no evidence of labor troubles except labor shortage. The oil districts can use so many men and pay such high wages that they attract labor from the farms and the farmers have difficulty in getting their cotton picked. The cutting off of immigration has made a shortage of labor throughout the country, he says.

On his homeward journey he was much delayed by storms both in Texas and Eastern New Mexico. There was considerable snow and zero weather. Schedules were disorganized and there were several wrecks. He was able to stop for a few hours to visit old friends in Albuquerque where he formerly lived.

DEATH OF JOHN J. LAWS

John J. Laws, who has been a resident of Glendale for the past twelve years, passed away Sunday evening, November 30, 1919. He had been ill for nearly a year and under the care of a nurse. He was a native of Kentucky, where he was born in Boyle county, February 6, 1830, For a number of years he resided in Iowa, from there coming to Glendale as stated about twelve years ago. He leaves three daughters and one son, Mrs. J. R. Maxwell, of 202 West Park avenue, this city; Mrs. Stella Boynton and Mrs. Josie McCune, of Idaho, and William P. Laws, of Nebraska.

Funeral services which will be conducted by the local Masonic lodge will be held Saturday afternoon at the Little Church of the Flowers in Forest Lawn Memorial Park at two o'clock.

COLONIAL HOUSES

Several houses of the Colonial type are being built for Mark Russell by Clarence O. Smith, north of Doran, on Louise street. These are nearing completion and Mr. Smith is just starting another Colonial at 511 North Jackson street and one on Kenwood between Lexington and Doran. These are to be modern in every respect and up to the minute in all their appointments. The rooms are spacious with oak floors throughout. The finish will be of white enamel and old ivory and the bathrooms will have built-in tubs and woodstone floors.

WEDNESDAY CLUB

ENTERTAINED BY MRS. THORWART, MOTHER OF MRS. GLOVER

Mrs. Charles Glover, of 416 West Myrtle street, is having the pleasure of entertaining her mother, Mrs. Thorwart, from Chicago. This afternoon Mrs. Thorwart is entertaining at the Glover home the members of the Wednesday Club, of which her daughter is a member. A cafeteria luncheon will be served and a social afternoon enjoyed. This club is quite a philanthropic organization and the collections taken up at the meetings are devoted to charity. Its members have arranged for donations of canned fruit to be sent to the Children's Hospital in Los Angeles, and a good deal of time is devoted to needlework on garments for the poor. Its membership list includes: Mesdames Herbert Reed, G. D. Roach, Albert Muhleman, Frank Muhleman, Clara Ringert, Frank Hester, Harry Clotworthy, Charles Freshman, Charles Sanders, J. W. Hearnshaw, William Viohl, Lida Lytton, A. H. Russell and W. Gibson.

Mrs. Thorwart will be here until the middle of January, when she expects another daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Parker, who will come to the Pacific Coast and make the trip to Honolulu on which she will accompany them.

GLENDALE, CALIFORNIA, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1919

SIDELIGHTS FROM GERMANY

Ex-Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria has bought a property in Mergentheim, Wurtemberg, and plans to spend his declining years there.

Social diseases are making frightful inroads in the German schools. The Agrar-Korrespondenz reports that many children under 14 are affected, and that an even greater number between the ages of 14 and 16.

British occupation authorities at Cologne forbade marriages between British soldiers and German girls except under special permits of the German government.

Italy recently sent in its first peace airplane to Germany with a load of official mail.

Dusseldorf furnishes an apparent pipe dream to the effect that America is planning to erect a "press palace" there, whose real purpose would be to further American commercial supremacy. The necessary building material would be hauled all the way from the United States the report said.

A wolf hound, a reminder of the dog in Jack London's "Call of the Wild," roams in a forest preserve near the Swiss border. The animal has turned wild since being left behind by returning soldiers a year ago.

Business men are laying complaints against the German telegraph system saying that in many cases, mails go faster than messages. Considerable business is lost thereby.

A recently invented movie machine in use in Berlin takes automatic pictures of race finishes and settles beyond question any arguments as to which horse came in ahead.

Coblenz dispatches report an American school with American teachers has been erected for the benefit of army officers who have established their families in the town.

The German thinks liberty is gone in American with prohibition. This idea was set forth in a local cartoon depicting the Goddess of Liberty, New York, taking a drink and saying, "Now, quickly, another swallow and then—freedom, adieu."

You may get away with murder in Germany, but it's dangerous to carry weapons for murder purposes. A soldier finding his wife untrue killed her, pleaded temporary insanity, and was acquitted—but he did six months for carrying a gun.

Dancing and what goes with it—that is, the wine and the light and the music—costs Germany 60,000,000 marks a month according to estimates of the Neue Berliner Zeitung. Berlin alone has more than 500 dance halls, to say nothing of the so-called "dance bars."

SOCCER BALL GAME

The Soccer game between the Columbus Ave. and Pacific Ave. teams was played yesterday and was a tie or 1-1. The first goal was kicked by William Paigg, who kicked the ball to Frederick Whitaker, but was unable to get it through. Frederick Whitaker kicked the ball back and it hit the other boy and got through, making a goal for Columbus. The next goal was for the other side and was made by William McClammy. The playing was pretty even on both sides. The next game will be played on Columbus Avenue grounds.

es and any place that bananas will grow. When banana farms are destroyed by the banana disease they plant either coconuts or cacao on same to utilize the land. A vigorous healthy coconut palm when in full production gives about 250 coconuts a year at an average selling price delivered here of $60 U. S. currency per thousand, that is $15 gold per tree each year, from which expenses have to be paid of keeping the coconut walk (proper term) cleaned and in shape, gathering the nuts and husking them and delivering on beach where they are taken to schooners to be stowed in coconut houses until there is a steamer to take them to the States. Coconut trees are planted 24 feet apart. They give the first nuts after five years, and are in full production at 10 years, and continue in full production for 30 years when they decline and finally die out at 70 years, if disease has not attacked them meanwhile. There is considerable disease gets them on this coast. The bug or germ is probably carried from palm to palm by the buzzards that roost in the palms. The seed coconuts, that is, selected nuts in the husk, are placed in nurseries, and kept damp. In the course of a few months a sponge forms inside the nut, which grows and expands until it cracks the nut and the husk, and the green palm sprouts out; after the sprout is about two feet high it is set out in the ground a proper depth, and weeds allowed to grow around it until it is three years old. This is to keep it shaded while young. After three years the palm is strong, and then the ground around it is kept cleaned of all other growth. The coconut walks have to be cleaned three to four times a year here. The nuts to be shipped are never picked from the tree, as when they are fully developed they drop from the palm, are picked up from the ground, and are placed in piles where they are husked. It is a very difficult and tedious task for the unfinitiated to husk a coconut, but those who know how remove the husk with two movements —and can husk from one thousand to two thousand five hundred a day. The husked nuts are shipped loose in the holds of the ships. In receiving nuts all under four inches in diameter are rejected. In order to inspect them all nuts that look small are dropped into a four-inch hole in a board and if they pass clear through the hole are rejected. Some places the coconuts are not shipped, but broken open and dried either in the sun or in mechanical driers, and the coconut meat duly dried, packed and shipped in bags; this is called copra, and the oil is pressed out and used for many purposes, lard, butter, soap, etc., and the meal is used to feed animals, such as milk cows. The S. S. Truxillo sailing tomorrow for Mobile, on which I am mailing this letter, is taking 32,500 stems of bananas and 400,000 coconuts. This is the biggest producing time of the year for coconuts although nuts drop from palms every day in the year. Exceptionally well kept coconut palms in good soil produce an average of a coconut a day the entire year. On the coconut producing islands of Honduras, the native women cut the coconut meat up into very small particles, or grate it, then boil it until the oil is all out of the meat, skim it off the top of the water and use it instead of lard; however in this way it retains the flavor of the coconut and it takes some time to get used to eating anything cooked in such oil, although after one acquires a taste for it, it is not bad at all. The coconut industry on this coast will eventually be large, as all the banana plantations of Honduras are attacked by disease and will probably not last over 20 years, and as fast as the soil gives out for good-sized bananas, coconuts and cacao trees are being planted. The company here has now about 2000 acres of coconuts and are planting more all the time. They also have experts here studying coconut palm diseases so as to combat same on a large scale and insure a good production.

CITY PLANNING

By Wm. F. Bixby, C. E.

Wonders may be wrought in the physical appearance of a city by following to completion an effective definite program of local improvements. The systematic planting of trees on every residential street will, in the years to come, bring the reward of grateful shade and beauty. The trees selected should be suitable to the locality and should have symmetry of growth, stateliness, ample foliage, cleanliness, hardiness and freedom from offensive odors. Young trees should not be trained in place by means of a stake or pole driven down beside the trunk, as it prevents the growth of roots on that side, with the possible loss of the tree in a high wind.

For every mile of streets and boulevards there are two miles of parkings; in every mile of street, an acre or more of land upon which well kept lawns and shade trees properly spaced and cared for are a great asset, a comfort and a pleasure.

Every city should have a forester, whose duty would be to care for the trees along its streets and boulevards. He should be competent to advise and encourage the people in the planting of shade trees. A man so employed would be a valuable asset to any city and the salary paid him would be a good investment.

Educational sub-centers should each contain, a branch library, a neighborhood park, a swimming pool, a playground, an athletic field and an intermediate school, with plenty of grounds to be used as a setting. Playgrounds should have full athletic equipment, tennis courts, running track, swimming tanks, and many diversions that both young and old can enjoy. A modern, up-to-date recreation field should have at least six or seven acres of land, and more if possible.

Civic centers should be a pleasing combination of architecture and horticulture.

Legislation

Cities of the United States can do those things which are permitted or directed by general or special enabling acts, while cities of Continental Europe can do almost anything not forbidden by law. In some states legislation authorizes any city to create a city planning commission.

If the city officials can be made to appreciate the opportunities presented to them to plan in a farsighted way for future development and to avail themselves of the popular interest in this subject it is quite possible that substantial and lasting results may be secured. Success will be depend upon the good sense and sanity with which the powers entrusted to commissions of this sort are exercised, and to the good sense and sanity of the city officials in supporting their commission.

The commission should have maps made of the city and of land outside of the limits of the city, which may be so near or so closely related, that its development will materially affect the growth of the city. Ordinances should be adopted forbidding the receipt, for record of any plat or map showing the layout of highways or streets, upon private property, or building lines in connection with such highway, until a copy of the plat shall have been filed with the commission and it shall have certified its approval thereon; such certificate of approval being regarded as a part of the record of the original instrument. Owners may be forced to file their maps by refusing them such benefits as street lighting, water, and other conveniences, until they have complied with the law.

Tree planting Acts (Cal. 1913 and 1915) make it possible for the property owners on a street to have trees planted and cared for and the cost of such improvement assessed to the property in proportion to the benefits derived. The residents of a district may work out a uniform plan of tree planting for that district, and, with the co-operation of the city officials, cause the plan to be successfully carried out.

Financing a City Plan

The development of a proper city plan must be done progressively, as needed, and it is of the utmost importance that such work should be sanely financed. Cost of improvements included in the plan can be met; either by direct assessment upon the property which will be benefited by each particular improvement; by making the expense a general city charge; or by a combination of the two methods. When the city pays all or a part of the cost, the funds for the purpose must be raised in the annual tax levy, or they must be borrowed by bonding the city.

In the small city the creation of a public "square," about which, or in which, the chief buildings are to be grouped, is of general interest and benefit to the entire community. All public activities, even recreation and amusement, will center there. It will be conceded that the city itself should properly pay a share of the expense, but the share to be assumed by it will be less in proportion to the amount of the special benefit resulting to the particular locality. The most valuable property will be that fronting on this square, so that if its creation will result in special benefit to the surrounding property, that property should bear a correspondingly larger burden.

If a new park is to be created, the property in its immediate vicinity will acquire a certain fixed character by which its value will be substantially increased; if a new and important public building is to be erected, it also will have a marked influence upon the property in its neighborhood.

The recognition of the fact of the benefit and of the obligation to pay a special share of the cost, in return for that benefit, seems only a question of elementary justice.

In the case of local streets the purpose of which is simply to furnish light, air and access to the abutting property, that property could fairly be required to pay the entire cost of the acquisition and improvement of the street. In the case of street widening, or the cutting of a new street through built-up sections, the local benefit is less marked; the mere fact that a widening or extension is required to accommodate traffic being conclusive evidence that the street has assumed more than local importance. When a highway is given a more generous width in the expectation that it will be called upon to accommodate a certain amount of through traffic, the benefit is more general, and the assessment area, in such a case, may be extended to a line midway between it and the next street of more than residential width. That part of the expense should however, be confined to the abutting property, that the cost to it shall be somewhat more than that of the narrower street. In the case of arterial thoroughfares, or the first street to be opened through an undeveloped territory, the effect of which will be to give access to, and to stimulate the development of, a large district, the area of benefit will be correspondingly enlarged. When a thoroughfare of exceptional width is to be treated as a boulevard or parkway, the entire city or metropolitan district will be substantially benefitted, and should bear a portion of the expense.

Up to a certain limit property fronting on a wide street is more valuable; on the other hand, after a street has reached a certain width, any addition to the width will not involve additional benefit.

Practical City Planning

City Planning, the most important activity that can be undertaken by the citizens of a community towards its upbuilding and general welfare, means an effort of the city as a whole to agree upon improvements in civic matters so as to produce, in the future, the very best living conditions. As neighborhood loyalty is a tool which can be made invaluable in working out the future civic problems, the citizens should have an opportunity to take part in the preliminaries of the plan in the making.

Every city has an individuality of its own. If the city expresses its own wishes, the resulting plan will be much better than a collection of theories from a single individual, or even from a limited group.

Business Men's Associations, Women's Clubs, High Schools and individuals can make a careful study of, and arouse interest, in City Planning. A City Planning Association, an organization composed of delegates from the different local societies may be formed with the officially appointed City Planning Commission as a nucleus, and hold monthly meetings. Surrounding sections should be given the benefits of the Planning Association without expense.

The City, through its proper officials, should get accurate maps, on a large scale, showing the topography of the city and the topography of undeveloped sections and of contiguous territory. The maps need the insertion of all the established street grades, the location and depth of all sewer, water and gas mains, and the location of the poles and wires of the telephone and electric light companies, and also a record of the character of the streets and sidewalks throughout the city, so that they will show just what the conditions of the city are.

GENERAL SMUTS IN CAPE TOWN

Few men have a greater facility than has General Smuts, the Premier of the Union of South Africa, in saying the greatly needed thing. Again and again, in the course of the war, when there seemed to be some danger of the ideals for which the Allies were fighting growing dim, General Smuts, in some public utterance, would state these ideals afresh, and in a way so forceful as to lead public thought unerringly back again to its higher hopes. Thus, eighteen months before the conclusion of the armistice, at a time when Germany was enjoying an apparent heyday of insolent power, General Smuts insisted, in a memorable speech at the Guildhall, in London, that "great, silent, invisible forces" were fighting for the Allies. "In the end," he added simply, on that occasion, "it will be recognized that it was not so much our valor or the strength of our armies, but these deeper forces that carried us to victory."

And so, today, at a time when, in the tremendous clash of views over the world settlement, still in progress, there seems, once again, to be a danger of the ideals for which the allied peoples struggled so long and so faithfully being lost sight of, General Smuts comes, once more, to the rescue. There was about his recent speech in Cape Town the same steady faith, the same fearless insistence on the paramount importance of the ideal, which characterized all his previous utterances.

General Smuts insists on keeping before the world the great fact that the war was a war of ideals, and that, as such, it was by no means brought to a conclusion by the signing of the armistice, last year. With all his remarkable ability for presenting an old theme in a new light, he patiently traced, once again, the evolution of the Prussian idea. With steady hand, he drew the picture of the German thinker confronted with Darwinism, seeing in it terrible possibilities, undreamed of by Darwin himself, and immediately setting himself to apply the theory "not only to the struggle for existence among the lower animals, but, ruthlessly, in every department of activity and thought."

The system remained with the Germans, General Smuts explained, not as a mere dream or as an ideal. They determined to try it as a big experiment. They tried it, and it was the most awful experiment in the history of the human race. They stopped at nothing. If it were a struggle for existence, and the strongest were to survive, they must not be held back by any qualms of conscience, but must pass through so that they might stand out as the survivor in the field of existence amongst the nations. If the war had meant anything at all, it had meant the complete defeat of such an idea, and the complete failure of one of the greatest experiments in materialism the world has ever witnessed. "Once more, the answer has been given," General Smuts declared, "that the victory is not with the strong, and that the crude views of Darwin do not apply to the realms of true ideas, but rather that victory is ever with the finer and nobler dictates of the human race."

So did the South African Premier restate, as it certainly needs to be periodically restated, the case against Germany. But immediately he had done so, he turned to point his hearers to the great task which still lay before them, namely, the actual realization, not only in the state, but in each individual in the state, of those ideals of real liberty and self-government for which they had fought.—C. S. Monitor.

AN URGENT APPEAL

Surgeon General Rupert Blue, who is deeply concerned with the spread of tuberculosis in the United States, calls upon the people of the country to buy Red Cross Christmas Seals and to aid in the fight being conducted by the National Tuberculosis Association against the white plague. The appeal follows:

"Over one hundred and fifty thousand Americans die annually from tuberculosis. This is an appalling waste of life when we consider that tuberculosis is classed as a preventable disease. Moreover, because this loss of life occurs almost entirely in the ranks of the young adult population, health authorities the world over have come to consider the control of tuberculosis as still the most pressing health problem confronting them. Every year the National Tuberculosis Association by selling Red Cross Christmas Seals raised a considerable sum of money to be used in a nation-wide campaign to combat tuberculosis. This year a special effort is being made to interest school children in this work and December 5th, 6th and 7th have been designated as days on which the seals are to be sold in the public schools, synagogues and churches. Because of the seriousness of the situation, I trust that the campaign this year will be particularly successful."

NOT ENOUGH LAND FOR EX-SERVICE MEN

That the funds appropriated by the California legislature at its last session is not sufficient to colonize two areas in the state, and that as a consequence a large number of ex-service men will be unable to acquire farms of their own is the opinion of the State Land Settlement Board in a statement today issued from its offices at the University of California. The statement follows:

"Owing to the high cost of labor and material the State Land Settlement Board has reached the conclusion that the funds appropriated at the last session of the legislature will not be sufficient to buy, develop and colonize two areas. It has given notice that no more land will be purchased until the tract in Merced County has been improved and settled. The notice to those who have offered lands has carried the explanation that the Board has been reluctant to take this action, in part because some of the tracts offered were regarded as well suited to closer settlement, and in part because the large number of ex-service men who understand farming will not be able to acquire farms of their own in one settlement."

AID FOR JEWISH REFUGEES

Fled to Siberia, to escape the horrors of Russia, destitute Jewish refugees, seeking haven in that bleak land, received 1,347,511 roubles to aid them in their struggles against starvation from the American Jewish Relief Committee and allied Jewish Relief agencies for the months ending October 1st, according to a report just published.

Included in the recipients of this relief were thousands of Jewish war prisoners, about whom, Frank P. Rosenblatt, Siberian representative of the Joint Distribution Committee, which disburses funds of the American Jewish Relief agencies, writes: "The abject misery of the war prisoners is beyond imagination."

The largest Siberian expenditure was 537,000 roubles, almost half the total, for underwear and other clothing, with which to clothe the refugees for the winter.

Thousands of the refugees are exiles, forced from their homes with no means of existing and living in absolute want, reports received by the American Jewish Relief Committee declare.
